

Family Care Plan

One of the most important considerations of family readiness is to ensure that your family is taken care of during times of drills, annual training, mobilization and deployment. Army National Guard Soldiers are subject to the policies and regulations found in AR 600-20, Army Command Policy, and will implement plans during any period of absence for annual training, regularly scheduled unit training assemblies, emergency mobilization and deployment or other type of active duty. Every single-parent Soldier, dual military parent, single and dual-military pregnant Soldier and Soldier whose spouse requires special care are required to develop a family care plan. Taking care of these considerations now will help you and your family be prepared for any period of separation.
